As this chart shows, bans on simply possessing weapons did not continue into the 18th and 19th centuries.
4	1606	England	4 Jac. I, ch. 1 (1606)	Repealed exemption for subjects living with 12 miles of the Scottish border for the keeping of crossbows, handguns, and demy hakes.	Objection to inclusion. “Historical evidence that long predates [the founding] may not illuminate the scope of the right if linguistic or legal conventions changed in the intervening years.” Bruen , 142 S.Ct. at 2136. And English history is ambiguous at best, and the Court saw “little reason to think that the Framers would have thought it applicable in the New World.” Id. at 2139. 5	1686	New Jersey	Grants, Concessions, and Original Constitutions of The Province of New Jersey 289–90 (1881)	Prohibited the carrying “privately” of any pocket pistol, skeines, stilettoes, daggers or dirks, or other unusual or unlawful weapons. Punishable by fine of 5 pounds for first conviction, and punishable by imprisonment for 6 months and a fine of 10 pounds.	Objection to inclusion. This law is not “relevantly similar” to CA’s assault weapon ban. It does not ban possession, transfer, or manufacture of any arm. It regulates only carry of certain arms, and even then, it only regulates how they are carried. Bruen , 142 S.Ct. at 2133. “Historical evidence that long predates [the founding]

6	1689	England	English Bill of Rights of 1689, 1 Wm. & Mary ch. 2, § 7	Provided a right for Protestants to have “Arms for their Defense . . . as allowed by law.”	No objection to inclusion. Though it is an English law that predates the founding by nearly 100 years, it evidences a general right to arms for self-defense that carried into the New World. See Bruen , 142 S.Ct. at 2136. To the extent, however, the law limited its scope to “Protestant” subjects, it includes a restriction on the rights of disfavored populations (e.g., Catholics) that would not survive in America past the ratification of the 14 th Amendment. Further, such a restriction is not “relevantly similar” to CA’s assault weapon ban because it restricts who (i.e., only disfavored groups) may use and possess arms, not what arms anyone may possess. Id. at 2133. Further, if a restriction that applied only to disfavored groups was a sufficient historical tradition, then neither Heller nor Bruen would have ruled in favor of the individual right to keep and bear arms.
7	1730	New York	William Livingston (Editor), The Laws of New York 199 (1752), ch. 560, § 20	Prohibited a slave from possessing or using a gun, pistol, sword, club, or other kind of weapon unless in the presence and at the direction of their Master or Mistress.	Objection to inclusion. This law is not “relevantly similar” to CA’s assault weapon ban. The law presents a flat ban on possession of multiple commonly-owned weapons by slaves, not individuals who would have been considered “the People.” This law predates the founding by more than a half-century, shedding little light on the understanding of the second amendment.

341	1783	Massachusetts – City of Boston	1782–1783 Mass. Acts 120, ch. 46	Prohibited the possession of any “fire arms,” and among other devices, loaded with any gun powder. Punishable by forfeiture and sale at public auction.	Objection to inclusion. The law is not “relevantly similar” to CA’s assault weapon ban. It does not ban possession, transfer, or manufacture of any arm. It regulates only how arms are stored (i.e., loaded with hazardous material”). And it regulates for completely different reasons than CA’s assault weapon ban (i.e., to prevent fires in towns made of flammable wood). Bruen , 142 S.Ct. at 2133.
